rather rule shaper. Today NAM is one of the largest organisation outside United Nations and is considered to be a platform for third world solidarity.

This is just one example, because today India has become one of the strongest pole in geopolitics, which has now moved from being a mere abstainer to a rule shaper. In this essay we will analyse various dimensions in which India has contributed to its rule based order. We will analyse how a nation which was considered a mere "Geographical entity" existing on earth to a rising voice of Global south and one of the strongest pole in Geopolitics.

Political scholars like Tanvi Madan have criticised NAM as an example of India's isolationism, which has also been equated to USA's Munroe Doctrine, but JL Nehru has held that NAM is not a tool for India's isolationism rather is an example of India's pragmatism. As under NAM India wishes to engage with all the nation equally - this is popularly known as "multivector Approach" in International politics.

NAM has set the tone for rising India's consciousness which made it one of the strongest nation in International relation. Happyman Jacob presents a paradox of globally rising India and regionally declining India, which has

To this our external affairs minister S. Jaishankar has responded that - "India is not for or against any nation, neither has India abstained. Instead we have always picked our side and we stand firm by it - we are on the side of Peace" and has requested nations to give up the narrow definition of "National Interest" & prioritise the Global good for overall benefit of the humanity."

the same time India has always adhered to the principles of common but differentiated responsibility.

Based on this principle India along with other developing nations has abstained from initiatives like - Just energy transition protocol (JETP), Carbon border adjustment mechanism (CBAM), Koroni'a joint work on agriculture as it places additional burden on third world countries and they lack both in funds & technologies to swiftly transition towards cleaner economy.

These acts represent that India is no more a silent spectator of the developed nations, rather it's both a critic as well as well as a balancer of the power in geopolitics.

Similar stand has been taken by India on the "Nuclear policy". Post world war II one of the significant development the world witnessed was Nuclear arms race. To put an end to it Global powers came up with the Non proliferation Treaty, Comprehensive Test ban Treaty, etc which has also been rejected by India.

India considers these treaties as discriminatory as they aim to prevent nuclear proliferation among other nations except the P5 i.e. USA, China, Russia, France, UK. This dictates the cold-war mentality as it acts in favour of victors of world war. India despite these challenges has went on to have its Nuclear policy.

India's foreign policy has been guided by the idea of 'Panchsheel' & 'Quadrilateral Doctrine', which reflects India's magnanimity & benovolence.

Recently Xi Jinping in his speech has held that, it is the time countries in International politics adhere to the idea of "Panchsheel" based on idea of mutual respect for each other's sovereignty & territorial integrity.

This act of an adversary praising India's ideology itself reflects India's growing prominence. It clearly highlights that India is now at a stage where it does not ~~the~~ need to look for alignment with superpower rather India itself is a prominent pole in Geopolitics and that's the "India way".

"An eye for an eye will make the whole world blind."

When Gandhi launched the No-Confidence Motion (1921), there was great enthusiasm among the masses. As Gandhi held - "If NCM is properly implemented India would attain swaraj within a year". But to everyone's surprise Gandhi called back the movement post Chauri Chaura Incident (1922). This led to criticism of Gandhi's decision from every section of society. To this Gandhi replied - "When you use violence against violent repression by British, it gives them leverage to use greater force against us and this will create a vicious cycle of violence for violence creating more misery for all because -

In this essay we explore various manifestations of "eye for an eye" in contemporary times and how it has lead to blurring of vision against humanity making the whole world blind. Along with this we will also see instances where and equal and opposite reaction becomes important in order to ensure a greater good.

Darkness cannot drive out darkness :

Gandhi's entry into the Indian national movement is considered to be a watershed moment as it changed the entire course of action. We moved from prayer, petition and propaganda (Moderates) and extremist activities towards Satyagrah.

Gandhi's idea of Satyagrah is based on Non-violence (Ahimsa) and truth (Satya). Bipin chandra in his book "India's Struggle for Independence" calls Gandhi as a spectacular mass leader. He advocated for "non-violence" as a strongest tool which ultimately led India to its victory.

In hindsight if we see the question here is - "Did India have enough resources to fight British through violent means?" The answer was a no - and this would have led to more repression, masacare and misery.

Therefore Gandhi calls - Ahimsa as a tool of strong.

The entire concept of Satyagrah was based on the idea that - Violence should not be answered with violence.

Instead with strategy and nonviolence as it will lead to less for all. It's said-one of the biggest myth is that - "There

The perfect example for this is the world wars - that humanity has

life and property - shall forever remain the biggest loss of humanity, because eye for an eye makes the whole world

the violence emanating from terrorism and the results are before us. USA faced loss of life of several thousand soldiers from 2001-2020 - which ended with its abrupt withdrawal from Afghanistan followed by takeover of Taliban in 2021.

Since then Afghanistan has been facing severe humanitarian crisis, human rights violation, increasing role of non-state actor in international politics, etc. The USA's decision of "Eye for an eye", has created an even more turbulent situation.

Malala - a young activist states "weapons can kill terrorist, but education can kill terrorism". This^{is} what is supposed to be the right course of an action. The focus should not be on there have been 7100 deaths in last 5 years (2019-2023) because of LWE. The basic ideology guiding these extremists is - violent overthrow of the existing system for which they have taken up arms against the government.

But Indian government instead of retaliating with greater force has focussed on the root cause of such discontent. IDSA report has highlighted that LWE is not a mere law and order problem instead it is a issue arising from governance and developmental deficit.

To tackle this challenge government has come up with developmental schemes like - Eklavya model residential schools, infrastructure development plans, setting up of Geo tagged basic

Reinforcement of strength :-

Though the idea of Gandhi of "An eye for an eye" holds true for all circumstances but at certain situations we need to reinforce our strength to deter the adversaries. India's policy towards China post-independence was based on the idea of "Hindi-Chini Bhai Bhai", this was very well evident when India offered its permanent UNSC seat to China as an act of benevolence.
